

Water-Finder Finds Minerals.
A reader in Dorset, Vt., writes that he is a water-finder. He uses a forked stick but can not explain what power causes it to point downward when he is passing over water. Not only can he locate water, but by placing a small piece of lead in the end of the stick he is able to find lead when under the ground, once locating a buried pipe for a farmer. He can also locate copper. —Montreal Herald.

MANY INDUSTRIES TIED TO TOBACCO

Prohibition of Weed Would Mean Big Financial Loss to Allied Trades.

WHO USES THE MATCH?

The Smoker Mainly—Also Responsible for Spending Hundreds of Millions Annually for Licorice, Sugar, Coal, Cigar Boxes, Tin Foil, Etc.

By GARRET SMITH

"Get a match?" How many times a day is that question asked in these United States? How many more times is the question unnecessary because most pockets are kept well supplied with the useful little article? Anyhow, inasmuch as it is estimated that there are 80,000,000 tobacco users in the country, we would guess that the answer to that question would run into the hundreds of millions.

For if it weren't for the smokers in these days of electric lights how many matches would be used? A pretty small proportion of the number of these "sticks of bliss" produced in the country every year. Abolish tobacco and the match business would be shot to pieces.

But the match business is only one of a dozen or more allied industries which derive large revenues directly or indirectly from the tobacco trade and would suffer heavily if national prohibition of tobacco were to go into effect as some of our reformers would have it. The annual sales of tobacco products, based on retail prices, is estimated at $1,987,000,000. Of the cost of producing and selling this quantity of cigars, cigarettes and other forms of the weed, some hundreds of million dollars are paid out for other things than the raw tobacco and labor of making it up.

$25,000,000 a Year for Boxes
For example, the tobacco trade consumes each year 45,000,000 pounds of licorice, 50,000,000 pounds of sugar, both used in flavoring tobacco, and 650,000 tons of coal. It is estimated that the value of wooden cigar boxes used is $25,000,000 a year, quite an item to the lumber business and to manufacturers of the boxes.

In making these boxes 550,000 pounds of nails are employed. Other large items used in making and preparing tobacco for sale are tin and lead foil, paper for bags and cigarette wrappers, cloth for tobacco bags, labels, coupons, etc., involving the printing trade extensively.

Then building contractors and manufacturers of machinery are largely interested. Investments in plants and machinery employed in manufacturing tobacco are estimated at $102,000,000. Replacement, up-keep and interest on the investment make no small sum annually.

And let realty men note there are approximately $25,000 tobacco farms in the country, with a total estimated valuation of $160,000,000. Of further interest to real estate men is the fact that there are 700,000 retail establishments selling tobacco, involving a total rental and up-keep impossible to estimate, besides the large amount of office space occupied by administrative branches of the general business.

The insurance men, too, have their share of the pickings. The tobacco business pays out annually $7,000,000 in premiums in the United States.

And there are the railroads who reap revenue from 2,210,000 tons of tobacco products every year.

As for the advertising business, here again it is impossible to form any estimate of the enormous annual outlay.

The prohibition of tobacco would also knock a good-sized hole in the receipts of the United States government. The internal revenue receipts from tobacco for the fiscal year 1920 amounted to $295,809,355.44. Customs duties provided an additional $25,000,000 in round figures, making the total revenue return to the government $320,000,000.

Influence on Popular Sentiment
It is this interlocking of the tobacco business with so many other interests and the vast amount of financial loss that would be involved in the abolition of tobacco that is one of the most serious aspects of the proposal to prohibit the sale of tobacco, a proposal, however, which has little support by public sentiment if the newspaper editors of the country are correct in their estimate of that sentiment.

In a poll of the editors made recently by the Tobacco Merchants' Association of the United States, through the Press Service Company of New York City, 95 per cent of the 7,847 editors who replied expressed the opinion that the people of their communities were opposed to any law against tobacco. As these editors represent some 80,000,000 readers the results form a pretty general test of national opinion.

In their remarks accompanying their replies many of the editors expressed it as their opinion that the opposition of their communities to the abolition of tobacco was based to some extent at least on the damage such a change would do to the business interests of the community. This was particularly true in the tobacco growing states and centers where there were large tobacco plants.

But when the extent of the business involved in the allied interests of the tobacco trade is considered, as above briefly outlined, it is clear that there is hardly a section of the country that would not be affected directly or indirectly by abolishing tobacco.

POLICEMAN NOW GIVES OUT FACTS

Says Tanlac Enabled Him To Pass Examination With Rating A-1 And He Now Feels Great

"I never paid out money to better advantage in my life than when I got Tanlac, for it has restored my health and built me up fifteen pounds in weight besides," said Frank J. Hebbler, patrolman on the Covington, Ky., police force and living at 513 Bakewell street.

"For a long time past," he continued, "I had not been in the best of health, and last spring I started all of a sudden to going down hill. What I ate didn't seem to do me a bit of good. After meals I bloated up so tight with gas I could hardly stand the pressure of my belt around my waist. I was on night duty, and my legs hurt so it was difficult for me to get around in patrolling my beat."

"My nerve went all to pieces and I usually went home all tired out and never got any sleep—just dozed by fits and starts and got up feeling worse than if I hadn't gone to bed at all."

"But Tanlac has just knocked out all these troubles and got me to feeling like a new man. Since taking it I can enjoy my food and it does me good. I sleep like a log and am in tip-top condition in every way. I recently underwent the regular re-examination for the police force and passed physically with a rating of A-1, which I never could have done in the shape I was in before I took Tanlac."

"Rare" Ben's Epitaph.
Not only is Ben Jonson's epitaph in the Abbey, "O rare Ben Jonson," one of the simplest ever composed, but it is said to have cost no more than eighteenpence. The stone over his resting-place was originally quite bare, and an admirer of the dramatist, as a personal tribute, paid a mason 1s. 6d. (36 cents) to cut the four words on the stone. The author of this simple epitaph was probably Sir William Davenant, who succeeded Jonson as Poet Laureate, and was also buried in Poet's Corner, with a similar inscription on his tombstone, "O rare Sir William Davenant."

Early-Day Peddler.

An important merchant of centuries ago was the man who did your buying for you. In those days there were no mail-order houses nor was there such a thing as running into town to do your shopping. So there was evolved a professional shopper who made it his business to buy what you needed. He was known as a packer, packer, or pake-man, and from these words the modern names resembling them have sprung.

Timepiece Gave Good Service.
Timepieces, which reached high efficiency early in the machinery era and are subject only to slow wear, should rank as the most enduring of working mechanisms. A clock over the gateway of an English castle is reported to have stopped, and investigation has brought to light an inscription showing that the last repairing was done in 1760. At last worn out, the massive works have ticked off the time for 180 years with no attention except winding.

Beards in History.
Pliny, we are informed, "observes that Scipio Africanus was the man who introduced the fashion of the daily shave, and the Russians wore beards until Czar Peter enjoined them all to shave, but he was obliged to keep on foot a number of officers to cut off, by violence, the beards of such as would not otherwise part with them."

Curiosity and Study.
Curiosity is a passion very favorable to the love of study, and a passion very susceptible of increase by cultivation. Sound travels so many feet in a second, and light travels so many feet in a second. Nothing more probable; but you do not care how light and sound travel. Very likely; but make yourself care; get up, shake yourself well, pretend to care; make believe to care, and very soon you will care. I am sure that a man ought to read as he would grasp a nettle; do it lightly and you are molested; grasp it with all your strength and you feel none of its asperities.

DENVER MINISTER EDITS ISSUE OF DAILY PAPER.

From his pulpit, the Rev. W. H. Wray Boyle, Denver, Col., announced that he thought the average newspaper entirely too lurid. A Denver pastor immediately took up the challenge. What would he do with a daily paper, the editor demanded. The pastor was invited to get out a day's issue—and he did. All sensational news, including the Stillman trial, the Stokes divorce case and similar news was eliminated and, in their places, appeared a lengthy editorial on the "Ideas of an editor," a series of opinions on the jury system; a few telegraph dispatches regarding European and Washington affairs and diversified items. The experiment created widespread interest.
